Apr 28, 2017, 9:16am EDT

More than 250 people attended the 2017 Business of the Year Awards on Thursday at Jungle Island in Miami, where 10 South Florida companies and a non-profit were honored for their success, and Miami-Dade College president Eduardo Padron was presented with a Lifetime Achievement Award.

The awards recognize organizations that help boost the local economy with their sound business practices, financial growth and community involvement. This is the 20th year the SFBJ has presented the awards. This year, new categories were added to recognize a family-owned business, minority-owned business, a woman-owned business and a startup.

The awards were sponsored by Bank United, Comcast Business and Florida International University.
